An introduction from the NUS Vice President, Further Education Union Development:

A new “Model Constitution” for FE Students’ Unions

Both the AoC and NUS believe that strong, healthy and vibrant students’ unions in FE are vital. Their work on democratic participation, representation and student activities make for a successful community in colleges.

Within a students’ union in a modern further education institution, a number of citizenship development opportunities arise:

- students’ union elections are high profile events in the college calendar and give students experience of democratic participation in a real yet safe environment – literally thousands of students vote in students’ union elections each year;

- students’ attendance at a union parliament meeting gives them experience of participating in debate and discussion around issues inside and outside the college;

- the executive and committee officers of a students’ union often attend meetings and organise activities which contribute to their skills development;

- students’ unions work with trade unions, health organisations, and voluntary sector organisations on many issues and these can develop the students’ wider sense of community through activities, campaigning and volunteering.

Local students’ unions are governed by the 1994 Education Act, and this provides the legislative framework in which a “whole college” approach to the embodiment of citizenship values within a college can be explored. A case study outlining the exciting developments at Merton College is included in the pack as an example of this approach.

This resource pack gives both students’ union officers and colleges advice on how to construct or review a union constitution to meet these requirements and needs, and represents the latest in good practice and legal advice.
The AoC/NUS Model Students’ Union Constitution:

A Guide for Students’ Union Officers

The purpose of this section of the pack is to aid anyone who wishes to either:

- write a constitution from scratch
- rewrite certain sections of one that already exists

Included in the pack is a guide to students’ union constitutions and a model document, containing both articles and schedules, for colleges to adapt and use. The model represents both the latest legal opinion and an agreement between NUS and the AoC on how best to ensure healthy, vibrant, democratic students’ unions.

Please note that the model is only a guide and it will be necessary to look at local conditions first. Contact your NUS Regional Office if you need assistance.

What is a constitution for?

A constitution is a legal document that sets out the activities and procedures of an organisation. There has to be a constitution before the union is recognised by other bodies - particularly college governors and NUS.

a. GOVERNORS

The governors are actually responsible for making sure that the college is run in line with government legislation. The college's constitution is in effect a document known as the "Instrument and Articles of Government". A document issued by the Department for Education and Skills gives guidance on what should be in the articles concerning a students' union at the college. The wording usually is:-

"Any students' union shall conduct and manage its own affairs and funds in accordance with a constitution approved by the corporation and shall present audited accounts annually to the corporation. No amendment to or rescission of that constitution, in part or in whole, shall be valid unless approved by the corporation."

The wording in your own college's instrument and articles should be similar.

Students' unions have a responsibility to make sure they stick to their constitution. If it is broken then the governors may wish to pass comment or even take some form of action. Equally, if the college tries to interfere in the way students run the union, students should appeal to the governors.

For example: a student wishes to stand for union president. The principal sends a memo to the union saying that the student cannot stand for a number of reasons. The union, therefore, could appeal to the governors who would examine the constitution and rule whether or not the student could stand.

Any changes the membership may wish to make to the constitution have to be approved by the governors. If the changes have been agreed democratically it would be hard to say no. At the same time, the governors cannot propose their own amendments to the constitution; they do not have this power as they are not members of the union. The procedure for changing the constitution will be defined in the amendments section of the constitution.

b. NUS

NUS is a voluntary membership organisation comprising a confederation of local student representative organisations in colleges and universities throughout the United Kingdom and Northern Ireland that have chosen to affiliate and pay a membership fee. It has nearly 750 constituent members (CMs) - virtually every college and university in the country.

NUS is one of the largest student organisations in the world and represents the interests of around five million students in further and higher education throughout the United Kingdom. NUS provides research, representation, training and expert advice for individual students and students’ unions. It deals with over 15,000 welfare enquiries each year and trains over 3,000 students’ union officers.

To be an affiliated to the National Union of Students a students’ union needs:

: a regular source of income
: a democratic constitution

Members need to have indicated, in line with the constitution, that they wish their students’ union to be affiliated to NUS. This is a requirement for all types of colleges.

The constitution:

: provides the framework for the running of the union;
: outlines where and how union members can air their concerns;
: shows how the executive committee can act on behalf of members;
: defines what the union can or cannot do.

Remember - being a legal document, the constitution protects union decisions provided they were arrived at by the method laid down in the constitution.

Changing the constitution:

NUS gets many enquiries from union officers who are anxious to change their constitution. They wish to do this for a variety of reasons - most notably "because it doesn't work" or is "out of date". It may be that certain committees or posts are no longer needed. Circumstances of the union may have changed, for example the union may be going through a merger - or it could be that the constitution doesn't work because people don't make it work. For example, there may be provision for a union parliament but it never meets. This does not necessarily mean that there is no need for a union parliament, but that its role requires clarifying.

When going through any proposed changes to the constitution, make sure they are discussed as thoroughly and as widely as possible. The changes will then need to be passed by the sovereign body of the union, in our model the union parliament, and then receive approval by the college corporation before they can be implemented.

To summarise:

- look at some of the difficulties and problems the students' union faces;
- decide whether or not a constitutional change would solve the problem - or whether it is a functional/political problem;
- advertise any proposed changes widely and involve the membership in the discussion.

The structure of the constitution:

The constitution is not meant to be a complicated and secret document jealously guarded by the executive committee. It is an active document that union members use to raise the issues that concern them, or that officers can use to seek members' views on certain issues. Either way the constitution should be as easy to understand as possible. The way it is set out is therefore very important. There should be three sections:

1. The Articles - these form the main body of the constitution. They set out what people can or cannot do and define the aims and objects of the union. The ‘notes’ section of this pack explains the nature of the common clauses.

2. The Schedules - these consist of some sections that require more detail. They are rules that cover particular areas of the constitution and are usually operational in nature. For example, within the Articles the membership need only know that elections will take place at a certain time for certain posts. The specific rules and regulations that deal with elections are placed in a schedule so as not to fill the main body of the constitution with unnecessary detail.

3. Appendices - these cover regulations that the membership cannot directly change. They include the Code of Practice, the opt-out procedure and the union disciplinary procedure.
The main content of this pack is a standard constitution that can be incorporated in full or in part into your students' union. The constitution starts from the principle that the students' union should be easily accessible to the members who wish to participate in activities. The constitution also incorporates the necessary requirements of the Education Act 1994 Part II, as well as current charity legislation.

The model constitution is based on the following decision-making model:

The union parliament

The union parliament is the sovereign body of the students' union. It is the top decision making body, save those decisions made by a referendum. The members of the parliament are elected from constituencies within the college. These constituencies may be based on sites and/or the faculties that students study in.

As well as making policy, the parliament will receive and approve reports from the executive officers. They will also approve the union’s annual budget and accounts and agree amendments to the union’s constitution and rules.

Some parliaments will approve new clubs and societies and confer honorary membership on individuals.

The executive committee/trustee board

This is the body responsible for the day to day running of the union. They organise activities and should meet regularly.

In this version of the model we have separated out the “executive” from the “trustee board”. This is to ensure that the model fits with charity law, where in unincorporated associations those in control of the charity's finances would be deemed trustees - this new section ensures that members of the trustee board are over 18 whilst allowing under 18s to be elected to the executive.

The trustees are responsible for ensuring that the union's assets are used in accordance with the constitution and policy, as well as current legislation.

The executive officers are usually elected by a ballot open to all students in the college, although some members may be elected by sites. The executive is usually made up of a president (in some unions this is a sabbatical - a student who takes 12 months off their course, and is paid an allowance to work full time for the union) and other officers with portfolios that cover education, recreation, welfare, sports, communications etc.

As well as implementing decisions set by the parliament, the executive will also be responsible for the strategic direction of the union and promoting the union to students.
The following notes explain each clause.

Name and Status

The important point to note here is that the full title of the students' union has been defined as “the union”. If you use a shortened form or any abbreviations you must always qualify what you mean e.g. Association of Colleges (AoC) - don't use the initials (AoC) without explaining them.

Aims and Objects

<thead>
<tr>
<th>What can the union do?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The aims and objects of the union are the legal limitations on union activities. They are sufficiently broad to allow the union to undertake all normal students' union activities.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>It is a good idea to include a clause along the lines of 2.2, and your college may well insist on the reference to independence from political parties and religious organisations in 2.6, but be aware of what this means.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>It does not mean that the union cannot fund a political club such as a Labour Club or a Conservative Club. It is well established in law that student unions, although charitable, may provide funds to such clubs as these further the educational objects of the union.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>In addition, the union can form and promote views on student-related political issues such as student funding.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Membership

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Who is in the union?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Some unions have different clauses that denote different levels of membership for different types of students. It's much easier to have one clause as in the model constitution. However, the union as it develops may want to extend some form of membership beyond the student body. This is alright provided it is made clear that they have no powers of policy making.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>You may find that, for example, a member of staff devotes a lot time and effort into helping run a students' society (e.g. a member of staff who regularly prints the students' union newsletter, or the member of staff who runs a sports club). As such the students' union may wish to reward the person by giving them honorary membership. It should not, however, be given lightly as it is a great privilege.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other members of the college staff may just wish to attend union functions and, as such, should be charged a membership fee for associate membership of the union, thus enabling them to join individual clubs and societies (paying the same club membership fee as the ordinary members).</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
In this version under 16s are defined in a separate category of membership; this is because the 1994 Act was written around organisations of students that formed the generality of students in a post-16 institution. On advice, therefore, under 16s may not participate in elections or be elected to office, and colleges and executive committees will want to ensure that they discuss the best ways of serving this group of students.

You may wish to allow members of other local colleges into your functions, in which case the reciprocal membership clause is needed.

Union Parliament

Who decides what the union does?

This clause is one of the most vital; it's the forum for the representatives of the union to air their views, as well as being the governing body of the students' union. In a number of colleges the physical make-up of the college, a lot of sites spread around a wide area, will mean that holding a single general meeting of all the students is nigh on impossible. In this scenario the union has to develop systems of representation that are accessible to the individual student. In this model, although there are elected representatives with voting rights, individual students are allowed to attend and speak.

There are one or two points worth noting:

- 7 day notice allows all part-time students at least 2 to 3 days notice of the meeting, if they wish to attend. It also allows individual students the opportunity to consult their reps.

- Quorum is the number of people you need for a meeting to take place. Quorums may vary between 25 members to a half of the membership. Bear in mind the higher the number the more democratic but it should not be so high as to be unobtainable.

- The membership of the parliament should be based on the idea of representative interest groups. This could be on an academic basis, in this case faculties and/or electing people from each site. You should choose the system most appropriate to your union.

Executive Committee and Trustee Board

Who does the work?

It is important to remember that the trustee board are the trustees of the union and they are all collectively responsible for decisions that the union makes. They have responsibilities laid down in charity law. We would recommend that you contact the Charities Commission and obtain copies of booklet CC3 ‘Responsibilities of Charity Trustees’. The address is in the NUS Guide.

No person who is under 18 can serve as a trustee. For this reason we have constructed the model so that there is an executive committee and a trustee board (who are the trustees and have to be over 18). This allows students under the age of 18 to be able to participate and hold positions of responsibility in the union.
Obviously you should choose posts that will suit the college's needs. Members of the executive should have a clear function. You will need to draw up job descriptions for each post, examples are contained in the schedule to the constitution. The executive should be made up of positions that are 'doing' positions, so you should avoid representative posts as such. They should sit on the union parliament and other committees.

For further information consult your NUS Regional Office on the range of positions which exist.

You will note in clause 5.4 that the model promotes executive committee elections in March each year. It is important that these officers are elected during this period for a number of reasons. This will allow one set of officers to be able to handover properly to the new set, thus building greater continuity into the running of the union; it allows the newly elected officers to be trained through NUS; it ensures there is a team of people who can plan and execute an effective promotion strategy for enrolment.

Students who are on 1-year courses still have the opportunity to become members of union parliament.

Clause 5.8 allows for the office of president to be a sabbatical post. A sabbatical officer is an elected officer who takes time off their course to serve the union full-time for a year. They are usually paid an allowance by the union during this period of time. Even if you do not have a sabbatical in your union, it is worth building in this clause as it means that you can implement it quickly if money does become available for a sabbatical position. It is important that you state in the clause that the sabbatical will receive a paid allowance.

Sabbaticals should be treated by the college as students. They will fall under the regulations relating to students apart from those relating to courses.

For more information about sabbatical positions contact NUS.

Clubs and Societies

There is no need to go into detail here. It refers the reader to the relevant detail if they want it.

Affiliations to External Organisations

This clause is a requirement of the Education Act 1994 Part II. The model standardises the number of students required to trigger a referendum to challenge an affiliation with the arbitrary figure of 200 members. The legislation specifies a maximum of 5% of the student body, however in many colleges this is not practical and the clause has been designed in recognition of this.
Complaints Procedure

What to do if you are not happy with the union or its officers

The complaints procedure should be laid down in the code of practice for the students’ union and included as an appendix to the union constitution.

The way to remove officers from their positions should be clearly explained.

If a student officer is removed because of disciplinary reasons then the full appeals process must be exhausted before the union can move to a by-election.

Union Finance

Money for the union

This is the basic responsibility a students’ union has in relation to its funds. This clause outlines the powers that the union has to open a bank account. The details of the signatories to that account are contained in the finance schedule referred to in the clause. Under the Education Act 1994, the governing body has a right to receive a budget, audited accounts and interim financial reports. However, note that their role is one of approval and monitoring. It is not the job of the governing body to set the budget or decide areas of expenditure.

The financial year is the same as the college financial year.

Minutes

Freedom of information

Being a democratic organization, the union needs to make all "government" as open as possible. Placing minutes in the library means that minutes are kept safely and properly filed, as well as being in the public arena.

On items which the meeting deems to be confidential, it may be appropriate for the union to develop a specific code detailing the kind of matters that will not be discussed in public.

Amendments

Changing how the union runs

The notice period for constitutional amendments is included in Schedule Three (Meeting Regulations).

The review process every 5 years is a condition of the Education Act 1994 Part II.
Indemnity

This clause is important as it protects the officers of the union from being held liable for any losses that the union may incur, as long as they acted constitutionally and responsibly.

The one thing you can't do is indemnify people against illegal actions. As a union you might want to add a sentence about ultra vires (i.e. doing things that go beyond the aims and objectives of the union).

Referendum

Polling students on their opinions

The returning officer for the referendum will be appointed annually by the union parliament. However, referendums cannot necessarily be planned and it may be difficult for that person to make themselves available. You may wish to give them the power to appoint a deputy.

Code of Conduct

The responsibilities of members

The code of conduct will also contain the disciplinary process as outlined in Appendix Two. The code should be developed to incorporate equal opportunities policy, as well as including details about behaviour and what is expected of the student.

Interpretation

Interpretation of the constitution is required whenever a matter arises which is not clearly covered by the clauses in the constitution. Any ruling made by the president should be put in writing and stored with the constitution.
This schedule tells you everything that you need to know about running elections in your students’ union. It is vital that elections are held in accordance with the constitution and at the times stated. The dates for elections should be set at the beginning of the year and you should get them published in the college calendar.

It is necessary to have voting over a sufficient period of days so that part-time students can vote. Unions that fail to do this could find themselves at the receiving end of a complaint.

The counting system is available from NUS in a guide.

The Education Act 1994 Pt II requires that “the procedure for allocating resources to groups or clubs should be fair and should be set down in writing and freely accessible to all students”.

The meeting regulations are rules that you can use to help run your meetings more efficiently. They can certainly clarify matters if there is a point of confusion over what to do next. However, if you are going to use them then you need to make sure that the membership have a copy and understand them. This certainly means making sure they have a copy of this schedule or producing an easy-to-understand guide to meetings.

This schedule goes into more detail about the trustee board’s responsibilities for administering the union’s finances. The schedule should allow for the trustee board to take prompt action to protect the union’s assets without having to make constitutional changes.
Schedule 5

Job Descriptions

Who does what?

These outline the roles and responsibilities of all the executive committee positions. Any additional posts that are created will need to have job descriptions developed.

Appendix One

Opting Out

Relinquishing membership

Every student has a right not to be a member of the union if they so choose. This appendix outlines how this works.

Appendix Two

Disciplinary Procedure

This appendix indicates what happens if students breach union rules or are involved in activities that could bring the union into disrepute. The disciplinary procedure also outlines how officers may be removed if the student body is not happy with their performance.

Appendix Three

Code of Practice

Clause 22 (3) of the Education Act 1994 (Pt II) requires that there is a Code of Practice in respect of how the union operates that is approved by the college corporation.

Case Study:
Merton College

There are two main mechanisms for giving our students a greater role in college decision-making and the incentive to be active citizens in the wider community - our two student parliaments and our tutorial programme. Why two parliaments? Because the college has two sites, one largely vocational and the other predominantly academic, we believe it encourages greater participation if each site has its own representative body. Currently there are 70 young people involved with the parliaments, split about 40/30 between the vocational and the academic.

The Principal and senior managers have been very supportive of the parliaments. Senior managers have accepted invitations to attend and answer questions on library facilities, refectory prices, term dates, sports and common room facilities, lockers, toilets and security. The students have won notable victories. For instance, student lockers have been installed at our Sixth Form Centre site and a mature common room has been opened at our vocational and access studies site.

Taking things a stage further, we now have executive groups of students, elected by the parliaments, who are playing a more proactive part in college affairs. At present the executive group follows up issues raised by the parliament, negotiates an action plan with senior management and reports back to the parliament - engagement in a political process that represents a genuine taste of active citizenship. Representatives from the two student executives sit on the Academic Board and the Corporation.

As managers, we need to learn how to ‘let go’ before the students can play a more proactive part. And, just as they must develop their skills, we need to improve our own to give them the space and opportunity to enjoy an enhanced role.

As a next step we’d like to see students giving more of their own ideas on what they would like to see happening in the college and how far would they want to be involved in management. Current ideas include running a summer jobs fair and organising and managing a major end-of-term event, each with budgetary responsibilities. We’d also like them to play a larger part in managing the student common rooms.

A very wide range of students have become actively involved in both the parliaments and the executives include students from foundation level, level 2 and level 3 as well as those from English for speakers of other language courses. Although I’ve been particularly pleased with the achievements of this group, the real measure of success will be if we can involve the more disengaged, many of whom remain sceptical about college democracy.

Looking to the future, there are some exciting opportunities for the students. We’re moving into a five-year rebuilding programme and have started to get student comment on what facilities should be included, even though they won’t be here to see the benefits. On specific issues, I’d be happy to see the students take on board the issue of managing their own students’ union. And in terms of continuity, I’d like to see the second years inducting the new students into the representative processes of the college.

This constitution shall take effect from ... [date]... and invalidates all former constitutions of this union.

This constitution shall be subject to review by union parliament and the corporation at least every five years, in accordance with the Education Act 1994.
Part II of the Education Act 1994 requires institutions to ‘take steps as are reasonably practicable to secure that any students’ union for students at the establishment operates in a fair and democratic manner and is accountable for its finances’.

The corporation recognises ... [name]... Students' Union as a democratically run organisation, committed to serving and representing the students of the college. The corporation will endeavour to ensure that the activities of the union do not contravene the college’s equal opportunities policy nor bring the college into disrepute.

The constitution is a legal document that sets out the activities and procedures of the students' union.

It provides a framework for the operation of the students' union by:

- Defining what the union can or cannot do
- Indicating how the executive can act on behalf of union members
- Outlining how members can air their concerns

The constitution is made up of three sections:

Section 1 - The Articles

This section defines the aims and objectives of the union as well as setting out what can or cannot be done.

Section 2 - The Schedules

This section gives further operational details in relation to how things get done.

Section 3 - The Appendices

This section includes other regulations that the union has to follow.
